NO HUSBAND FOR "MOLLY" SHERIDAN

Millionaire Iverson's Solitude for His Confidential Clerk.

WHY SHE DID NOT MARRY.

Promised a Fat Clause in the Rich Man's Will if She Remained Single.

NO USE FOR POOR RELATIVES.

Publisher Once Told a Friend His Money Would Not Go to Them, but to David Iverson.

William Iverson, the dead millionaire, had no use for "poor relatives," and he took Surrogate Arnold.

at least a paternal interest in Miss "Molly" Sheridan, his confidential clerk. These facts were brought out at the trial yesterday of the contested will in which William's brother, Edward Iverson; his nephew, John C. Iverson, and his niece, Jane Williams, are the contestants.

When the millionaire publisher died, about a year ago, at the Hoffman House, he left the bulk of his million-dollar estate to his nephew, David B. Iverson, and provided liberally for Mary Sheridan. Since then the suit to break the will has been brought on the ground that William Iverson was eccentric and of unsound mind and that he was unduly influenced when he made his will.

Bonds Caressed.
The case, which has been on trial for several weeks at intervals and the prosecution produced testimony showing that Iverson was shipped and idolized his money, actually caressing and fondling his bonds and securities in the presence of visitors. Further it was attempted to show that the relations existing between Iverson and Miss Sheridan were not strictly those of the employer and his clerk, confidential or otherwise.

The defense took its turn at direct examination yesterday, and it was William N.
Crane who testified as to the publisher's statements touching the disposition of his wealth.

"He said," said Mr. Crane, "that he was going to leave his property to David Iverson, his nephew, who, he affirmed, had been like a son to him. I suggested that he had other relations, but he interrupted me with:
'I am not going to leave my money to poor relations.'"

William Odell, another witness for the defense, remembered Mr. Iverson's solicitude for Miss Sheridan after his death. He said that he wanted to leave her something because she had been his faithful confidential clerk.

Afraid of a Husband.
Owen P. Brown remembered that Mr.
Iverson once told him that he intended to leave Miss Sheridan enough money to engage her.

Onset Bay, Mass., May 24.—From the snow-covered uplands of Thibet, where ascetics may readily develop the soul by starving the body, because there is little to eat up there, has come a precipitated message from a Mahatma, one of the wizards of the inner circle, who has a grasp on things infinite and is full of wisdom not within the reach of ordinary, flesh-eating, sensual mortals. This message, presumably from the rarified atmosphere of Himalayan peaks, where the power of vision is unquestionably strong, came to the Theosophists now at the Onset Camp Grounds, and is accepted by them as an who, according to that newspaper, is about Putnam Conn., May 24.—A westbound New a man at a point known as "Poor Farm Curve." It is believed that the man was E. T. Homer, a Pomfret farm hand. He was seen to lie down on the track in front of the train and there seems to be no doubt that it was a case of suicide.

"MORIO" SENDS A MESSAGE

It Was Precipitated from Thibet

Onset Bay, Mass., May 24.—From the
snow-covered uplands of Thibet, where
ascetics may readily develop the soul by
starving the body, because there is little to eat up there, has come a precipi-

the Theosophists now at the Onset Camp
indorsement of the followers of Mme. Blavatsky in their struggle for Theosophical supremacy.

Weird Words from "Morio." The message is said to have been promulgated through the mediumship of Henry B. Foulke, the leader of the followers of Mme. Blavatsky.

The communication is addressed to Anne Besant, Countess Wackemste and other asserted leaders of the theosophical movement in the West.
The Wizard of Inner Circle, who, it is claimed, indited this remarkable communication—believed here to be fraught with the greatest importance to the thinking and spiritual world—made known his authorship by signing the name "Morio" across the face of the parchment in a bold and striking hand.

The message is of considerable length, containing much that is purely personal.
Among other weighty things it says:
"Theosophists, having chosen their own leaders by votes and proxies of societies, are responsible for their own failure, as can be seen in the decadent quality of their past year's propaganda. It is only by following out the plans which we have arranged in the past, plans which originate in psychic faculties that further and growing schisms can be avoided."

The present leaders are cautioned to listen to the warning note uttered at the Lansdowne Convention in 1889 against the choice of leaders, who are denied by the powers who make Theosophy a divine wisdom.

Conferred Up by a Countess.
Mr. Foulke says that this message appears to be the result of a conference held at Onset Bay earlier in the present month, when the Countess Di Brazza, Miss Rosa Moore, and a party were his guests. He says that the Countess ransacked the cot-age and produced an idol, the famous image of Buddha, which acquired notoriety in the exciting times in Theosophical circles just subsequent to the passing on to the higher life of Mme. Blavatsky, and which President William Q. Judge, of the society in America, ridiculed so persistently, though he failed to lessen its secret powers in the minds of the dissenters from the Judge regime.

The Countess placed this image of mystery on the table in the reception room of the Foulke Cottage, decked it with flowers from India and besought it to deliver the warring elements and lead them to seek peace and find it at the Onset Bay camp grounds.

The weird, precipitated message, which is described as having unfolded itself like a huge mystic scroll over the head of the image of Buddha, is firmly believed to be an answer to the pleadings and conjurations of the Countess, and is interpreted to mean confusion to the Judge faction and the ultimate triumph of the present high priestess, Annie Besant.

SETS HER OWN BONES.
Mrs. Root's Legs Have Been Broken Eleven Times and She Knows What to Do.

Poughkeepsie, May 24.—Mrs. George Root, who lives at State Line, near this place, is confined to her bed with a broken leg, which was fractured in two places. While working at her washbasin she slipped and fell, the tub tumbling over on her. When found she had herself, with much grit, bandaged the leg, which made the process of setting by the surgeon much easier.

Mrs. Root's case is peculiar in that she has broken one or the other of her legs eleven times. The bones below the knee have been reunited so often that it is now impossible to break them by ordinary mishaps. Both the last fractures are above the knee. The last previous break she set with her unaided hands, the surgeon pronouncing the operation perfect.
